

THE MAP REMEMBERS WHAT POWER ERASES.

Nia Vellum can read the buried geometry of a city: sealed streets, edited memories, and the legal machinery that makes a person disappear. When rival yesterdays begin occupying the same blocks, she follows a three-needle compass with no center into a conflict over who owns history itself. To save Chroma, Nia and her unlikely coalition must replace the master map with something more dangerous: a constitution no single authority can control.
